I was then ordered to proceed to Commerce, Missouri, and organize a force for operations against New Madrid and Island No.10. I commanded the force thus organized, known as the army of the Mississippi, during the reduction of those places and the subsequent operations around Corinth. On the 21st of March, 1862, I was promoted major general of volunteers. In June, 1862, I was ordered to Washington and placed in command of the army of Virginia, which consisted of three army corps, commanded respectively by Generals Fiemont, Banks, and McDowell. On the 14th of July I was appointed brigadier general in the regular army. At the conclusion of the campaign of the army of Virginia, I was assigned to the command of the department of the northwest, and in January, 1864, to command the military division of the Missouri, which embraced the department of the northwest, the department of the Missouri, and the department of Arkansas, and included the whole region west of the Mississippi river as far west as California and Oregon, and as far south as Texas. In reply to your second question, I submit the following narrative, into which I have incorporated such official reports, letters, and telegrams sent and received...
