Original publisher: Washington, DC : Medicare Payment Advisory Commission, 2004 OCLC Number: (OCoLC)83258851 Subject: Medicare. Excerpt: . . . MedPAC also considered new technology introduced through formal national coverage determinations (NCDs). Between January 1, 1999 and December 31, 2002, CMS issued 18 NCDs related to coverage for physician and laboratory services and Part B drugs. We did not find that new technologies were introduced via these NCDs. In general, the NCDs formalized decisions made by local contractors, nullified local contractor coverage determinations, or specified that certain technologies would be covered only if provided to patients meeting specific criteria. Introduction of new technologies to the Medicare system Advances in science and medical technology are widely believed to have played an important role in the growth of Medicare expenditures over time. Advances in medical technology have added new services that have been extremely expensive, involving hospital stays that cost tens of thousands or even hundreds of thousands of dollars. In many cases, these new technologies have created new demands for physician office visits and other physician services and costly pharmaceuticals. Even where medical advances reduce per service spending, they may raise total spending by making it possible to treat more beneficiaries, including those who previously were too frail or ill to be suitable candidates. New technologies often enter the Medicare system informally. Technological change can occur within an existing code, sometimes but not always increasing a physicians work (and therefore the relative value of the code). This type of change may allow an existing technology or procedure to diffuse to new populations, by expanding the number of beneficiaries who can safely and appropriately be treated. New technologies also enter the Medicare system through formal...
